9:15 am Decision Making in a Community of Knowledge
Presenter: Steven Sloman, Professor of Cognitive, Linguistic, and Psychological Sciences, Brown University

- Steven is a cognitive scientist who studies how people think. His work illuminates how our habits of thought influence the way we see the world, how the different systems that constitute thought interact to produce conclusions, conflict, and conversation, and how our construal of how the world works influences how we evaluate events and decide what actions to take. The focus of his research is collective cognition, how we think as a community, a topic elaborated in his book with Phil Fernbach, The Knowledge Illusion: Why We Never Think Alone.

- 10:30 am Networking
- 11:00 am Perspectives in Leadership
Presenter: John Kirby, Dean, College of the Environment and Life Sciences,
University of Rhode Island
- This session is dedicated to understanding how effective leadership has played a role in helping our colleges, experiment stations, and Extension get to where they are today and identifying what leadership is needed to ensure that these units continue to contribute to the well-being of the lives, livelihoods, and landscapes of Northeast communities over the next 5, 10, 25, 50 years.
